The 2007 NAHSL Annual Conference, "Getting Magnetized: Search and Service Strategies for Nursing Excellence", took place on June 29, 2007 in Boston, MA. It was approved for 6 MLA CE credits and 4 nursing credits. In total 58 people registered for this program; 16 were nurses and 42 were librarians.

NAHSL ended 2007 with a membership of 222 including 8 student members. This was an overall increase of 12 members. Twenty members were new to the organization. Since 2005, NAHSL has offered free membership to students and has promoted NAHSL’s ongoing goal to increase student membership, retain continuing members, and recruit new members.

NAHSL, the North Atlantic Health Sciences Libraries, was founded in 1958 to promote the exchange of ideas and the sharing of information among librarians through professional development. NAHSL’s goal is to promote life-learning among medical librarians in the New England region and ensure a high degree of participation in professional development by members.

NAHSL’s goal is to promote life-learning among medical librarians in the New England region and ensure a high degree of participation in professional development by members. NAHSL met this goal by sponsoring continuing education programs in the region over the course of the year, by holding the Annual Conference, and by providing scholarship funding or reduced rates for members to attend MLA and NAHSL conferences.

NAHSL met this goal by sponsoring continuing education programs in the region over the course of the year, by holding the Annual Conference, and by providing scholarship funding or reduced rates for members to attend MLA and NAHSL conferences.

To accomplish this goal the Chapter Chair and Committee Chairs recruited and appointed new members to committees and involved them in NAHSL goals and organization. To date in 2008, 15 Members have been newly appointed to Committees, including to some Committees that had no members except the Chairperson previously.

2. Life Long Learning
NAHSL’s goal is to promote life-learning among medical librarians in the New England region and ensure a high degree of participation in professional development by members. NAHSL met this goal by sponsoring continuing education programs in the region over the course of the year, by holding the Annual Conference, and by providing scholarship funding or reduced rates for members to attend MLA and NAHSL conferences.

To encourage participation in MLA web conferences, NAHSL offered financial support for a single site registration in each of the New England states this year. Four states took up this offer for the November 2007 webcast on Scholarly Publishing.

In June 07, NAHSL co-sponsored a CE program with MAHSLIN (Massachusetts Health Science Librarians). The program "Getting Magnetized: Search and Service Strategies for Nursing Excellence”, took place on June 29, 2007 in Boston, MA. It was approved for 6 MLA CE credits and 4 nursing credits. In total 58 people registered for this program; 16 were nurses and 42 were librarians.

The 2007 NAHSL Annual Conference, Building Bridges: Connecting Medical Libraries and Communities, took place in Woodstock, Vermont, October 28-30, 2007 and was attended by 259 registrants. The Conference offered a wealth of professional development and learning opportunities. Keynote speakers included John Abramson MD on medical research integrity, Roy Tennant MLS on the new era in library information discovery, Helene Langevin MD on research in acupuncture, and Lori Alvord MD, on integrating Native American medicine in modern therapy. Exhibits and breakout sessions provided numerous opportunities for attendees. Networking and enjoyment of the beautiful New England village of Woodstock in late fall enhanced the Conference experience. 98% of registrants rated the Conference as very good or excellent.

The Education Committee held 6 CE courses at the October ’07 Conference. The topics were evidence-based medicine, health statistics sources, teaching skills for librarians, management skills, complementary & alternative health, and grant writing. All classes offered MLA approved CE credits. The committee surveyed the membership regarding potential CE courses for the remainder of ’08, and notified members of the many ways to get MLA CE credits such as classroom-based instruction, discussion groups, satellite conferences, web courses,
NAHSL Education Goal for 2008: Promote life long learning by librarians throughout the region in all 6 states. We plan to collaborate with the state health sciences library organizations and other library organizations to hold CE sessions in each of the states including the northern states. This is sometimes a problem because the northern states have fewer members and longer distances to travel for programs. We will determine the possibility of having programs broadcast for all within the region to take part in if they cannot make the program location. As a step in the direction, NAHSL co-sponsored an educational session on Electronic Resource Licensing in cooperation with the ACRL New England Chapter, MLA, and MAHSLIN held in 2 locations, New Hampshire and Massachusetts on March 3 and 4. NAHSL offered a substantial reduction in registration cost for the approximately 15 NAHSL members who attended one of the sessions. The 2008 NAHSL Annual Conference will be held October 19-21, 2008 in Lowell, Massachusetts and it will include the NAHSL 50th anniversary as a highlight.

3. Advocacy
NAHSL’s goal is to be an advocate for medical librarians and libraries throughout New England and to communicate our value within and outside of the profession. Advocacy activities by NAHSL included the annual award, promotion of the MLA benchmarking survey and communication of MLA national legislative advocacy activities.

The NAHSL Achievement Award for 2007 was awarded to Claire LaForce MLS, Medical Librarian at Rutland Regional Medical Center in Rutland Vermont. Ms. LaForce’s advocacy for rural community hospital libraries, particularly her successful effort in cooperation with the NNLM New England Region Hospital Committee to save the library and librarian position at Southwestern Vermont Medical Center Bennington VT, was noted as a reason for the selection. Her dedication to community organizations supporting grandparents raising children was also praised.

NAHSL supported the 2007 MLA benchmarking survey. NAHSL benchmarking liaison Shirley Gronholm with support of state representatives on the NAHSL Executive Board, heavily promoted this survey by email and on the NAHSL website. Regional participation has been comparatively high with 41 entries. An incentive prize was awarded by drawing from among the New England libraries that participated.

The Government Relations Committee, kept NAHSL members apprised of the issues and activities of the MLA legislation and advocacy committees, particularly in the areas of the NIH appropriation, public access to NIH-funded research, USA Patriot Act, and the publication of MLA’s revised “Copyright Law and the Health Sciences Librarian” document. The ‘08 Committee has proposed new goals. The Committee plans to assist members in establishing dialog with their state and national elected officials and to add a Government Relations web presence to the NAHSL website.

NAHSL advocacy Goal 2008: Make present and future work of medical librarians in New England a focus of communication, advocacy, and marketing both inside and outside the organization. Activities will include 1) news releases and stories about members on our own website, library news outlets, and local media; 2) Promotion of NAHSL and 50th anniversary at all state chapter meetings and other venues; 3) advocate NAHSL and library values in state, regional, and national agencies and legislatures.

4. Creating and Communicating our Knowledge
Though NAHSL has not developed an ongoing goal in this area, it provides a framework in which librarians can develop and present their research and scholarship. NAHSL members were active in presenting their work at MLA ’07. The Marketing Committee compiled a list of NAHSL members that participated in a presented paper or poster at MLA. To view the impressive list of NAHSL presenters in 19 MLA events see the NAHSL web site http://www.nahsl.org/MemberParticipationMLA07.htm A similar turnout at MLA ’08 in Chicago is expected.

The NAHSL ’07 Conference hosted a poster session on Medical Librarianship at the Annual Conference. Nine posters were presented by members. The three breakout sessions at the Conference were presented by NAHSL members.

5. Building a Network of Partners
NAHSL works in partnership with the National Network of Libraries of Medicine New England Region and with the 5 state chapters in the region. The NN/LM NER continues to host the NAHSL website, the NAHSL-L discussion list, the NAHSL Executive Board discussion list and discussion lists for the conference planning committees. The NN/LM NER also provides meeting space for the NAHSL Executive Board and other NAHSL committees. The 5 state organization representatives are full members of the NAHSL Executive Board per a change in bylaws voted on at the 2007 Annual Conference.

NAHSL members and representatives of the state organization served on the NN/LM Regional Advisory Committees (RAC). The RAC Education and Training Working Group designed and submitted an educational needs assessment survey which was answered by 271 people from all 6 New England states. The cooperation with the New England ACRL chapter for the educational program presented in March 2008, points the way to additional collaborations outside of the medical library community and with other state and regional library and health sciences organizations.

Summary: The NAHSL Chapter and Board are committed to the continuation of its role in support of its membership, medical librarians and medical libraries in New England, and to cooperate and support the Medical Library Association.
